Law Courts Hotel: Established 1902 on this very site.

The historic hotel commenced trading in 1863 and was originally called: "Auld Scotland Hotel". During its 145 years of business it has seen many many happenings. The gold rush days of the 1870's onwards, quickly established Dunedin as New Zealand's 1st city and was the catalyst in developing much of the wonderful architecture still evident today in our fair city.

During its existence, Law Courts Hotel has been home to many famous people, as highlighted by the stay of the HRH Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip who were accommodated here during their 1954 tour of New Zealand. With its close proximity to the Dunedin internationally famous Railway Station, the hotel has been a popular destination for many travellers. Indeed during the many famous rugby matches our city has hosted, Law Courts Hotel was typically inundated by many of the 1000's of visitors who arrived by train to see our 'local boys' or perhaps the All Blacks take on visiting teams. Win or lose the Law Courts Hotel bar was a popular watering hole as well as of course accommodating many guests during their stay in Dunedin.

The restaurant name "Wig 'n' Pen", was a previous name of the hotel bar, reason being that during years gone by, the bar was a frequent 'watering hole' for many of the 'judicial fellows' from the Judicial Law Courts, (Judges, lawyers, law clerks etc) plus the 'pen pushers' and others from Newspaper. (Located opposite the hotel) As one would expect, news items developed in the court house were then reported by the newspaper causing at times occasional 'opinion variances' between the two parties, that's when the Wig 'n' Pen bar became the ideal venue to 'sort out the issues'

In addition to the Judicial Law Courts Buildings located just below the Hotel, the Dunedin Prison is also close by; this aged facility was closed in 2007 with a new jail located south of Dunedin close the local township of Milton.
